Jane Etish-Andrews Named Director of International Office

Qu est-ce que se passe? A new director of the international office, of course! Jane Etish-Andrews, who previously spent six years as assistant director of the international student office at Boston University, joined Tufts about a month ago, replacing Leslie Rowe, who is now with the U.S. Foreign Service. Etish-Andrews is responsible for advising international students on academic, personal and immigration matters, as well as for providing advice on immigration matters to the university community at large.

Etish-Andrews not only worked at B.U., but she also received a bachelor’s degree in French and a master’s degree in teaching English as a second language from B.U. Noting that at B.U. there are 2,800 foreign students, while at Tufts there are only about 800, she says, “With a smaller body of foreign students, I can really get to know the students better here — and that’s what I’m looking forward to.”
